3. TEACHING, MENTORING AND ADVISING

Courses Taught

CCJS 200: Statistics for Criminology and Criminal Justice. Required statistics course for criminology majors. Either 90 or 180 students, depending on the semester. I have made the course available online through WebCT and I have created weekly automated quizzes on the reading.

CCJS 611: Statistical Tools for Criminal Justice. Required statistics course for professional master’s students in their first year. Enrollment is 20 students. I have also made this course available online through WebCT and I teach the course in a university supported teaching theater. I utilize the theaters by integrating online resources and desktop statistical packages into the lectures and in-class group projects.

Advising: Research Direction

Undergraduates: I have sponsored three undergraduates as part of the Undergraduate Research Assistant Program. I have served on one undergraduate honors thesis, and I am a co-winner of a 2004 American Society of Criminology Undergraduate Student Minority Scholar/Mentor Research Grant with student William Collins.

Professional Master's Students – Policy Analysis Projects: 3 completed students, 5 current students.

Master's Theses – I have served on at least 5 committees and chaired three committees: Mark Coggeshall 2000, Jill Farrell 2002, Gary Sweeten 2004. Jill and Gary are currently in our Ph.D. program. I am the chair of three current committees: Nadine Frederique, Melissa Reimer and Rachelle Giguere.

Dissertations -- I have served on 4 committees. I am chairing my first committee for Gary Sweeten.
