ALAP 2020

IX Congress of the Latin American Population Association

“Population Studies and the Challenge of Equality in Latin America and the Caribbean”

November 3-6, 2020

Valparaíso, Chile

The Latin American Population Association (ALAP) invites associate members, researchers, government officials, students, members of civil and international organizations and all those interested in Population Studies, to participate in its IX Congress. The event will take place in Valparaíso, Chile in November 2020.

Congress theme

The thematic emphasis of the congress reflects the commitment of ALAP to the study of the determinants and consequences of demographic transformations in Latin America and the Caribbean. In this congress ALAP want to consolidate a tradition of scientific exchange between researchers and foster comparative analysis with other regions. Thus, we extend our invitation to scholars from other regions.

The IX Congress is an important opportunity to consolidate the relevance of population studies in the region, for three reasons:

- The imminent implementation of population censuses in the region (2020 round).
- The key role of population issues in the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development
- The relevance of the 2013 Montevideo Consensus on Population and Development, as a political framework for population issues in the region.

The submission of short abstracts before March 6 is required. Short abstracts will not be evaluated but must be registered in order to enable participation in the congress. Abstracts in Spanish, Portuguese and English will be accepted.
